More Information

HB-29 is a medium-sized (3100 cubic inches) tote. The frame covers an 18 to 21 inch torso range – has been used by a 13 year old just under 5' tall. Like HB-27, this pack has a detachable rear pocket to carry essentials as a daypack. Front panel allows access to the gear without unpacking everything. It has pocket and port for a hydration system (not supplied by the club). With camping gear being lighter and smaller these days, this pack would be adequate for a lightweight weekend trip.

This backpack was obtained for the 2005 season for $190. Marmot appears to have discontinued this specific model in 2006 with its Diva line as a replacement. Similar packs would be Osprey's Ariel and Mountain Hardwear's Kite.
